THE EVENING STAR. WASHINGTON:

WEDNESDAY November 19, 1884. CROSEY S NOYES Editor. The Evening Star bas a regular, permanent bona fide daily circulation more than treble that of any other daily paper published tu Washington, and equal to that of all the ether daily papers here added together.

Mr. Blaine, in his Augusta speech last evening, presented with his usual point the argument for ontinued republican ascendency at the north as a foil to the "solid south." He set forth by various figures and illustrations the practical inequalities of suffrage, due to the intimidation of the negro vote, and he drew a dark picture of the danger to northern labor springing from the competition of a race in virtual slavery. He also maintained that a record of devotion to the "lost cause" is to-day almost essential to political preferment all through

The justice of some of the speaker's criticisms may be admitted, and it is indeed the very weakness of his plea that they are already admitted, and have been for years. It is no news that the slight attention to the sectional issue, basing his campaign on the tariff, which he maintained was the vital question, and that on which the party

Now that the campaign is over and its personalities banished, it is quite possible that interest in the southern problem may revive. The democratic slightest preponderance. It is distinctly on its good behavior. If it appears that its rule is prejudicial to mankind in any section of the country, the people can be trusted to see their danger and defend | Were never so much used as now, and never before

Senator Pendleton, whose "English act to create an office-holding class" it predicts will make the democratic victory barren of spoils. In the plainpoliticians expect and ought to have "the rewards of office," and it telis such "faithful democrats" that they are now to be excluded from participation in the public service, thanks to the Pendleton act. President Cleveland, according to the Enquirer, would like to appoint to office "honest, worthy democrats, no matter how meager in education they might be," but will be checked by "a republican Senate, with the Pendleton bill as a club." It therefore urges the "large class of democratic politicians who have been loyal in season and out, and who have labored year after year" for victory, not to build their hopes too high, and to be ready for the worst,-namely, to see republicans retained in office "till removed by death or for cause."

It is sad to hear these dirge-like strains mingling with the preans of triumph. And the wail will change to a roar if it really does appear that Cleveand intends to execute the law which Pendleton was instrumental in engrafting on the statutes. Hunger will bring tigers out of the jungle into populous cities, in the face of capture and certain death; will drive men to assault and robbery with | the prison in plain sight; will overcome the force of nature and lead to cannibalism and other IT WILL PAY YOU! strange and awful crimes; and it may even break

Recent events show the importance of maintaining a neutral zone around the chambers where laws are made. The Mexican house of deputies ed to every ebullition of popular feeling. luring a debate on the English loan, a ularity, a mob visited the neighborhood er and in the tumult that ensued the make government so precarious in ot exist here with much force, but it is i importance that the halls of legislaviolence and intimidation; and yesterday's riot in Mexico is, therefore, a fresh proof of the wisdom of the fathers in defending Congress against like

Campaigns and parties come and go, but Mr. Evarts dines forever. Another banquet was held in New York last night, and, as usual, he was the entral figure. And the worst of it is that good detuals and drink are simply wasted on him. After generation of magnificent dining he remains as pare and frigid as ever. It can be said of his chief lival at the table, Chauncey M. Depew, that his ody begins to show some swelling lines of grati-Evarts dines forever. Another banquet was held body begins to show some swelling lines of gratitude for the favors it has received.

Trade is your only peacemaker. Both France and already tired of fighting, and the rest of world votes the war very inconvenient, and suggests that the disputants settle their quarrel in some more civilized way than by the sword.

New York is a big state, but a railroad passenger can now ride across it for a dollar; and it is considerably further from New York to Buffalo than from New York to Washington.
